TROUBLED BY BURGLARS.

One Has a Narrow Escape from Capture at the Turner Residence.

The residence of C. L. Turner, at No. 661 North Meridian street, was entered by a burglar yesterday morning about 6 o'clock. The family all sleep upstairs, and about a quarter past 6 o'clock Mr. Turner's son heard foot-steps at the door of his room. Looking up he saw a middleaged man with dark bair and eyes. The thief ran down stairs and made his escape. It was found that he had carried down-stairs two pairs of pants belonging to Mr. Turner, and taken a small amount of money he found in their pockets. Not satisfied with what he had got, it seems that he was returning for more booty, when he awoke young Turner. A short time after the burglar had gone Merchant policeman Minor saw a man running north, and, suspecting that he had been in mischief, arrested him. When taken to the station-house the man gave his name as John Thompson, but last night he said it was Harris.

Robbed a Saloon-Keeper. Fred Pflueger's mloop, at No. 299 East Washington street, was entered by thieves last night, who carried away a few dollars in money, some eigars, and a revolver.

Charged with Theft. Mike Connell was arrested last evening, charged with stealing an overcoat from Tomlinson Hail on the night of the police ball.

One Indianapolis firm last week shipped $3,load to Cincinnati.

The proprietors of the Indianapolis pottery say that having many orders they are likely to keep in operation through the winter without any loss of time.

At the Evans oil-mills flaxseed is being re-ceived at the rate of twenty-five car-loads a week. Most of it is shipped here from the Northwest, the past year's crop near by having failed. The Indianapolis elevators on Saturday last contained 486,256 bushels of grain, against 500,- the corresponding date in 1887. It is said that several new manufactories will be established here next spring. One will employ 200 and another 125 men. They will be located on the Belt road if ground can be secured there on satisfactory terms.

E. C. Atkins states that the revival in the business of his company the last two weeks has been almost beyond precedent. Orders are numerous and large, one last week coming from London and another from Sweden.

The parties who have purchased the Shaw carriage-works will remodel the building and put in some fine machinery for the manufacture of cutlery. When in full operation the company will give employment to about one hundred men, most of them skilled workmen.

Since the first of the month 47,500 hogs have been slaughtered by the two packing-houses which have been in operation. Kingan & Co. have killed daily an average of 3,000, while Coffin, Greenstreet & Fletcher have killed about Judge Martindale and George O. Taylor re-ceived a telegram yesterday telling them of the death of their brother in-law, James A. Mc-Neams, at his home in Fairbury, Neb. Mr. McNeams was formerly a resident of Henry county, of which he was for sixteen years the re-

An entertainment will be given under the auspices of the ladies of Holy Innocents Church, in connection with a Christmas sale and supper, at Odd-fellows' Hall, Virginia avenue, to-morrow evening. Prof. Newland, with a company from the Institute for the Blind, Mrs. Scott and others will take part.

During the time when the high transconti-nental rates prevailed stocks with the furniture manufacturers largely increased, and at the same time export trade was rather dull. With the Indianapolis cabinet-works, especially, did the stock accumulate until it reached 5,000 desks, but in the last few days business has greatly improved.

During the day, when all the manufactories are in operation, the Indianapolis Natural-gas Company draws from eight of its twenty-one wells. At 6 o'clock in the evening the number is reduced to five, and after midnight for a few hours, and on Sunday, only three wells furnish the supply to its consumers. It is estimated that the fuel gas furnished by this company displaces 900 tons of coal.

The Indianapolis Stove Company, which for three months past has been having rather a dull trade, reports that its business is improving, and that its surplus stock is rapidly disappearing. During the dull times the company did not stop its work, consequently the stock of stoves was greater than in former years, when the company shut down for a short period.

There has been quite a revival in the hard-wood lumber trade with the Indianapolis dealers. A few years ago Indianapolis stood at the head as a hard-wood lumber market, but the dealers have allowed the prominence they had to lessen; but of late one or two enterprising firms have been formed and fresh capital put in, and the outlook is much brighter for this branch of business.

The wheel manufacturers of this country are again endeavoring to form something in the nature of a trust, through which higher prices for their product can be obtained. They say prices have dropped to such figures that there is no money in the business. The Woodburn-Sarven Wheel-works Company, which is the largest establishment of this character in the country, is one of the leaders in the movement. Should the arrangement be effected it will enable the companies, it is claimed, to largely re-

SERVICES AT THE CHURCHES. John Dumont Read's Sermon and an Address

in Behalf of the McAll Mission. The Rev. John Dumont Reed, of Sheboygan, Wis., occupied the pulpit of First Lutheran Church, yesterday. The subject of his discourse in the morning was "No Continuing City." He took for his text, Heb. xiii, 14: "For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come." One of the most perplexing limitations, he said, that mortals labor under is, that in all they say or do there is always an implied contradiction which reduces it to a logical absurdity. They are continually tripped up by their own words and actions. In order that all may go merrily and well one must entertain some fiction like children at play. He must pretend a great

"The things that continually engage our atiention," he continued, "and that we make so much of are all the while vanishing from our sight; so fast they go that we cannot keep track of them. We receive nothing; we create nothing that abides. It is all forever shifting. We know deep within ourselves that we never yet bave come up with reality, and the things we call by that name are only what we have discarded in its pursuit. In every man's nature there is a deep undercurrent of ex-pectancy. We look for something to appear that has not yet appeared. We wish to see a new thing under the sun, and when our mountain brings forth a mouse our disappointment only takes the form of a new longing. The one thing that we have always with us is the craving for something that is not yet ours. In this respect those that have much are not different from those that have little. People are not poor according to what they have, but according to what they lack; and we all feel our poverty more than we do our riches. Somehow we cannot rid ourselves of the notion that we fare at a scanty board. We are on short rations. Like Oliver Twist, we ask for more, but when more is brought us it is not enough; the sense of plenty is still denied us. And so we content ourselves with anticipating a great feast by and by, or those that seem to be feasting hold them-selves in readiness for a course that shall surpass in richness and delicacy the rarest viands known to mortal taste. No earthly vintage is so incomparable, but that the longing imagination of men would have a finer; and so it came about in the olden time that they invented marvelous fables about the nectar of the vented marvelous fables about the nectar of the gods. The world indeminifies itself for present loss by making liberal drafts on the past and future. We can escape the humdrum of our daily task only by bringing to it the glory and the freshness of a dream. For fiction is not falsehood, nor is fact necessarily truth. There are facts from which all that is best in us recoils, and which we must rise above if we would attain to aught of abiding worth. In fiction we find beauty that is denied to us in natural life; and beauty is true wherever we come upon it. That was a very foolish man who killed the goose that every morning laid him a golden egg. He paid too high a price for his scientific knowledge. We have no thanks for the man who takes from us our beautiful illusions. man who takes from us our beautiful illusions. We look on the disenchanter as an enemy. Parents think they must not tell their children Parents think they must not tell their children of Santa Claus or feed their young imaginations with fairy tales. What folly! Do you want to starve the finest part of the child nature in order that your children may become knowing! Do you think, then, that those beautiful flowers are so poisonous. Well, there are other poisonous flowers in the world, and if you do not supply your children they will not be long in supplying themselves; and it will be fortunate indeed if the blossoms they thus gather be as innocent as those you have denied them. If we shut the door of wonderland the joys of life will fly away, and we shall be left desolate."

There are people, the preacher said,

There are people, the preacher said, who lack the power of upward and forward vision. To their undertstandings all sentiment is but a childish thing. ings all sentiment is but a childish thing. They will have nothing but what is tangible; for them no "cloud-capped towers" rise, no head wears the impalpable glory of a halo. One submits to death with a good grace only when it becomes inevitable, and even then he does not let go of hope. The best happiness does not lie in satisfaction, but in pursuit; and the most exquisite delights are those that hold the suggestion of joys yet unattained. It is well that there is here no continuing city, for if there was one should not look for one to come, and so life would pass into indelence and decay. It is the looking for a city to come that gives depth to nature and scope to powers.

nature and scope to powers. The McAil Mission. Miss Edith Moggridge, who has been interested in the work of the McAll mission in Paris, France, for seven years, spoke, last night, at Roberts Park Church. Her sketch of her work contained instances of how the Bible had been received in France. Just at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, Mr. McAll visited France, and one day, while standing in the most revolutionary quarter of the city, was addressed by a stranger, who told him they wanted the Bible in that country, and he determined to begin his missionary labors. He bired a small wine-shop, and put in forty seats. He invited the people come, and every seat There are now more than 120 mission halis, more than 20,000 sittings and more than 80,000 Bibles and tracts are distributed annually. These mission stations are all over France and on the frontier. Those in the work teach and read the word of God only, and visit hospitals and homes. During the seventeen years in which these afforts have been made more than 5,000,000 Bibles, tracts and pamphlets have been distributed.

There are only six places in Paris where the Bible can be bought. There are adults' classes, men's classes and children's classes, and out of these classes two missionaries have gone to Corsica and four to Africa, two of the latter being stationed at Algiers. The mission supports a ship, which cruises along the coast of France, and the word of God is taught to the mariners. A statue has been erected to Coligny, standing just outside the Louvre, and one peculiarity is that an open Bible is represented, probably the only public figure in France of which the Bible forms a part. It is said the McAll mission is the salvation of France; that all denominations are engaged in it, and there are fourteen branches of the work, counting dispensaries, hospitals, schools, etc. France is pensaries, hospitals, schools, etc. France is now in its crisis, the lady said, and the next few years will determine her future. Both workers and money are needed for the spread of the gospel in that country. At the close of the talk a collection and subscriptions were taken

The people are not altogether satisfied with the management the Y. M. C. A. amusement committee gave the Nye-Riley entertainment Saturday night. Many complaints have been heard concerning the prices of admission which were higher than those heretofore charged for Mr. Riley's entertainment. That gentleman and his associate, Mr. Nye, were annoyed when they found the committee had advanced the prices, and they want the public to know that they had nothing to do with the matter. It is also their wish to have it stated that had they been made aware of the advance in time to have the prices reduced to the customary rates they would have insisted on that being done. But it seems no one knew of the advance, as the high prices charged at the box-office were not those as advertised. For instance, persons claim they went there expecting to procure seats in the balcony for 50 cents, as

Mike Noland and Tim Roland, shoemakers, who work at No. 84 South Illinois street, are about the same age, sixty-four years. They bought a keg of beer yesterday morning, which they had delivered at their shop, and after drinking for some hours they concluded to be friends no longer, and began to fight. They fought for an hour or so without doing any damage, and then grew so noisy and boisterous that Sergeant Bruce arrested both for assault and hattery. After they had been locked in the station, however, each accused the other of being responsible for all the trouble, and it was found necessary to put them in separate cells. They are good friends when sober.

Attacked by a Fruit Peddler. There was a quarrel on West Pearl street yesterday afternoon between Tony Hogan, a fruit pedler, dand Jim Gordon, colored, when the latter was stabbed in the arm. Hogan was arrested, charged with assault and battery. Gordon claims that he was walking along the street peaceably when Hogan attacked him with the
